About the NYSSA

The New York Society of Security Analysts has been a leading forum for the investment community since 1937. That year, a small group of security analysts decided to turn their casual lunch gatherings into a series of regular meetings. They held an organizational luncheon in a private dining room of the New York Chamber of Commerce. It was there that the NYSSA was conceived, with a membership of approximately 20 people, including Benjamin Graham, the "father of securities analysis" and one of the most influential men in the history of finance. Today, with more than 11,000 members, the NYSSA is the largest of the more than 135 societies worldwide that comprise the CFA Institute.
