CAYCE, S.C. (Oct. 1, 2026) – Dominion Energy customers in Yemassee recently attended a kickoff event for the Neighborhood Energy Efficiency Program (NEEP). They are among the over 400 customers in the area who are eligible for free energy-saving products and services through NEEP, which offers home assessments, on-site education and installation of energy-efficient products to income-eligible customers.

Customers began receiving information on how to participate in August, with installations in homes beginning in September and continuing through November. Dominion Energy representatives will complete installations at no cost.

“We want customers in Yemassee to have practical tools and information that can help them use energy more efficiently in their homes,” said Derek McDaniel, program manager. “Our goal is to meet customers where they are and show them that even simple changes around the home can make a difference over time.”

Energy-saving products available to program-eligible residential customers include the following:

- LED light bulbs
- Faucet aerators and low-flow shower heads
- Electric water heater wraps and pipe insulation
- Advanced smart power strips
- Door sweeps and weatherstripping for doors and windows
- HVAC air filter replacement
- Digital wall thermometers

In addition to NEEP, customers had the opportunity to talk in person with a Dominion Energy customer assistance representative and learn about the company’s available programs and resources.

Since its launch in 2013, NEEP has helped Dominion Energy customers across the state reduce electricity usage through direct-install improvements and energy education. Over the past decade, customers have saved enough electricity to power approximately 112,000 homes for a year.
