A Catch-Up Quarter on Cost of Deposits; BUY

On the heels of FCCO's 1Q23 earnings report, we're reducing our EPS estimates, mainly owing to the lower base NIM and pace of NII. While FCCO has impressively lagged on increasing deposit pricing through YE22, it seems that 1Q23 was the catch-up quarter. Yet, we believe the bank will continue to compare favorably on cost of funding through and after this cycle. The stock continues to benefit from a valuable low-cost, and sticky deposit franchise, a healthy capital cushion, a solid track record on credit, and perceived scarcity value of the South Carolina banking footprint. No change to PT; reiterate BUY.

Core EPS miss on lower NII: FCCO reported 1Q23 EPS of $0.45, which we estimate as core. This missed consensus of $0.49 and our estimate of $0.50. The core miss vs. our forecast reflected lower than expected core PPNR, partially offset by lower than modeled provision for loan losses. The core PPNR miss (vs. our forecast) reflected lower than expected NII and core fee revs, partially offset by better than expected core expenses. For more details on FCCO's 1Q23 results, please see our earlier First Look note.

Reducing our EPS estimates: After inputting FCCO's core 1Q23 results into our model and fine-tuning our assumptions, we're lowering our 2023E EPS by 27 cents (to $1.65) and our 2024E EPS by 23 cents (to $1.64). Main adjustments, besides the flow-through of the 1Q23 core miss, included a lower base NIM and pace of NII (with further pressure in 2Q23), partially offset by a slightly lower run-rate of core expenses and a modestly lower assumed pace of provisioning.

Reiterate BUY: We're leaving our PT unchanged at $23.00, given a higher assumed multiple and higher TBV/sh, albeit offset by our reduced EPS estimates. Our PT assumes the shares will trade at 13.9x our 2023E EPS and ~153% of our YE23 TBV/sh, with our 2023E ROTCE of 11.5%.

On balance, while we were disappointed by the lowering of EPS estimates, and recognize FCCO's sub-peer level of core profitability, we believe the shares' healthy multiple on TBV/sh is a well-deserved byproduct of the bank's very high-quality, low-cost and sticky deposit franchise (which is particularly of value today), strong capital cushion, solid long-term track record on credit, and perceived scarcity value of the South Carolina banking footprint.

The main positive takeaway from the quarter was demonstrated balance sheet stability, and actually, deposits were not only stable, but experienced healthy growth during a disruptive period for bank deposits. And, while most banks are seeing an unfavorable mix shift within deposits, FCCO's DDA actually remained fairly stable LQ. We also note that FCCO saw LQ increases to liquidity (loans-to-deposits slightly <70%) and capital (CET1 of 13.55%).

The primary challenge was heightened NIM compression (down 23bp to 3.19%), as while FCCO had previously demonstrated an impressive ability to lag on deposit pricing through YE22, this window has now clearly closed. The CEO characterized the spike in 1Q23 cost of deposits as representing the impact of some catching up, with the cost of total deposits increasing from 0.25% in 4Q22 to 0.58% in 1Q23.

Yet, it's worth noting that this higher cost of deposits still compares very favorably vs. peers, and when the cycle settles, we expect FCCO will continue to compare favorably.

Price Performance

NASDAQ: FCCO

Management described the 1Q23 hiking of deposit rates as more of a proactive process, yet also including some responding to customers' requests, and noted that the hikes occurred fairly early in the quarter (i.e., it wasn't a knee-jerk reaction to the bank failures in March).

We do expect further NIM pressure in 2Q23 and 3Q23 – albeit at a diminishing pace – and then for NIM to stabilize in 4Q23, and thereafter, to begin expanding given a long tail of fixed loan repricing, and eventually a positive tailwind from a Fed pivot to cutting rates.

Loan growth is a mixed bag. On one hand, FCCO is seeing a smaller pipeline given reduced demand associated with higher rates. We also get the sense the bank is a bit more scrutinizing on certain loan segments at this point in the cycle (e.g., new residential developers). All that said, management expects to see another quarter of mid-single digit growth given certain tailwinds, including the retention of residential ARMs (on balance sheet), momentum in the bank's new Rock Hill market, and funding of C&D commitments, as well as a reduced drag from payoffs.

Credit metrics remain very clean, with net recoveries and NPAs/assets down to 0.29%. Yet, we can't ignore that FCCO screens relatively high in office exposure (~19% of loans), a loan segment that investors have heightened interest in given the slowing economy and work-from-home headwinds. That said, management points out that over half of its office exposure is owner-occupied, the book is very granular, and there is very little of big offices located in metro areas.
