EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 22, 2019 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- A group of Old National corporate board members and executives will accompany CEO Jim Ryan and Lead Director Becky Skillman to the Nasdaq Stock Exchange in New York tomorrow, where Ryan and Skillman will ring the closing bell signifying the end of the day's trading. The group from Old National was chosen to ring the bell in honor of the company's 185th anniversary (which is Nov. 11).

"It will be a great honor to ring the Nasdaq closing bell, and it's an even greater honor to celebrate 185 years of helping our clients achieve their financial goals as a strong, ethical community bank," said Ryan. "We fully intend to continue exceeding the expectations of our clients and investing in our communities for many, many years to come."

Ten years ago, when Old National stock was traded on the New York Stock Exchange, a group led by then-CEO Bob Jones rang the NYSE closing bell (accompanied by board members and executives) in celebration of the bank's 175th anniversary.
