McGraw Hill Announces All Sorts, New English Language Teaching Course For Young Learners

2024-02-05

Columbus, Ohio – February 5, 2024 – McGraw Hill today announced the launch of a new English Language Teaching (ELT) course designed to help young learners around the world take their first steps towards learning English. The innovative six-level course called All Sorts, designed to the high standards that schools expect from McGraw Hill, is available now to schools in Mexico, Colombia, Asia and the Middle East.

“Interest in English language learning is growing at a rapid pace as the world becomes more connected and the demand for English language skills expands in the workplace,” said Anthony Lorin, President of McGraw Hill’s International group. “As a global leader in education with more than 135 years of experience providing educational content and curriculum solutions to learners and educators, we feel we are uniquely well-suited to support this expanding market.”

All Sorts helps young learners of American English begin a lifelong learning journey through fun and engaging lessons encompassing a wide variety of topics and learning styles. Researched, planned, and developed by the trusted experts in content, technology and pedagogy at McGraw Hill, All Sorts provides:

- Engaging activities designed to recognize and support a diversity of learning styles.
- Language learning developed and presented at an age-appropriate pace.
- A comprehensive grammar, vocabulary and function skills syllabus across all levels.
- Entertaining mascots, each with its own learning support function, to engage younger learners.
- Social and emotional learning features throughout to help students become life-long learners and good world citizens.

- Age-appropriate learning features integrated in every unit to encourage learners' exploration of other curriculum subjects through the English medium.
- Comprehensive support for teachers via print and downloadable Teacher Guides.
- A range of games, puzzles and projects that present language in positive, relatable, and memorable ways.
