2026-03-24

Senior executives to participate in panel sessions examining how to enhance human intelligence and academic integrity in the AI age

COLUMBUS, Ohio--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- McGraw Hill, Inc. (NYSE: MH) ("McGraw Hill" and the "Company"), a leading global provider of education solutions for preK-12, higher education and professional learning, announced its participation in the upcoming ASU+GSV Summit, taking place April 12-15 in San Diego, California. The Company's participation in the Summit underscores its focus on advancing AI-enabled solutions for educators and learners and engaging with industry leaders on the evolving role of technology in education.

Philip Moyer, President and Chief Executive Officer, McGraw Hill

McGraw Hill senior executives will participate in two sessions during the Summit, with Philip Moyer, the Company's President and Chief Executive Officer, sharing insights on effective AI use from other industries and Dr. Dave Duke, the Company's Chief Product Officer, Higher Education, discussing academic integrity in the AI age.

1) From Big Tech to EdTech: Building Human Intelligence in the AI Age

Featuring: Philip Moyer, President and Chief Executive Officer, McGraw Hill

Wednesday, April 15, 10:10 a.m. - 10:30 a.m. PT

Promenade A/B

Philip will join with Rajen Sheth, CEO of Kyron Learning, for a fireside chat. Drawing on their experiences working together at Google, they will share lessons from applying AI in other industries to education and opportunities for leveraging AI to enhance learning outcomes and support educators at scale.
